Dear LACIS community,

I'm delighted to share the good news that the Department of Education has once again designated us a National Resource Center, in conjunction with the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies at UW-Milwaukee, with which we form a consortium. Along with this honor, which we are sharing with six other area study centers on our campus, we are once again the recipients of a significant number of Foreign Language and Area Study (FLAS) fellowships.

The Title VI award both recognizes and encourages high-quality research, teaching, and service on all matters related to Latin America and the Caribbean. It also acknowledges the splendid work that our staff performs every day to construct such a vibrant intellectual community.

The University's general announcement is here:
